EXPERIENCE

Inger offers a genuinely client-focused approach, that is underpinned by robust frameworks, current evidenced-based thinking, and organisational experience.

Inger's passion is developing the capabilities and confidence of leaders through coaching that is informed by feedback and reflection. She encourages leaders and teams to broaden their perspectives, build on their strengths and make better decisions about what they do and how they go about it.

Having senior leadership experience within organisations that were undergoing significant transformation, Inger has a keen interest in leadership in uncertainty and complexity. She has led strategic people and culture initiatives at all stages of the organisational lifecycle and brings a pragmatic, strengths-based approach to her work. Supporting leaders to shape a culture of adaptability through learning, collaboration and engagement is core to Inger's current work within the Health, Education, Energy and Technology sectors.

Extensive experience in organisational development has taught Inger the importance of partnering with clients to ensure development and coaching activities align with the organisational context. She is an experienced facilitator of alignment and team engagement, creativity and innovation, and measuring and developing culture.
